Brandon,

I have the docs, thank you. The report is still downloading but I read the letter. One item to note is that yes, folks were immediately offered bottled water for drinking but folks are NOT given tanks or provided with potable water UNLESS they sign a hold harmless agreement with the refinery. So, many folks are still using the tainted water since they felt they didn't have enough information yet to sign the hold harmless agreements.

Also to be noted is the current owner is currently in litigation with both former owners and in that litigation sulfolane leaks, spills, and contamination have been documented for decades has been revealed but the public was not informed until 2009. They are in the summary judgement phase and the case has already amassed 15 volumes of docs which I have not had time to review at the courthouse in Fairbanks yet.

Thanks for all of your efforts on behalf of our environment.

Regards, Russ
